Course Code: ENG 1103
Course Title: Introduction to Literature (A): Poetry
Credit: 03

Rationale:
This course contains a diverse selection of poems of different structures, forms and lengths by poets from different ages and traditions. Taking the poems in selection as texts for special study, this course focuses on the understanding of various elements and aspects of the texts that go into making them poetic and thereby forming a basic orientation into the study of poetry. This course introduces students to the basics of English poetry. Emphasis will be given on literary terminologies, techniques, figures of speech and literary strategies used in poems. Students will learn the history of English poetry from its beginning to the present. This course will show students what poetry is and what it does, how elements (such as words, sounds, emotion, images etc.) work together to make a poem and what to look for when reading verses.

Course Objectives:
The objectives of this course are:

- To introduce poems as a form of literary representation
- To develop familiarity with different forms of poetic presentations and identify the differences among them
- To identify and study the special features of the language used in poems
- To learn the technical terms necessary to analyse, discuss and comment on poetry
- To help them grow consciousness about society and culture through reading literary works.
- To give a comprehensive interpretation of any given poem or selection of poems to develop critical evaluation

Course Title: 17th Century Prose, Poetry, and Drama
Credit: 03

Rationale:
This course introduces students with some of the major writings including essays, pamphlets, epics, and 'metaphysical poetry' in English produced in the 17th century England. The course will offer students an understanding of renaissance and how it influenced the philosophy of the seventeenth century. Students will be given an insight into the politics and practice of 17th century through different genres- epic, essay, drama, pamphlet, and allegory. They will not only read and interpret these literary masterpieces, but also familiarize themselves with historical, social, political, cultural and religious, and philosophical contexts. In the selection of subject matters, it was often serious about human flaws and therefore advocated an acutely felt need of controlling them with orders- social, religious, and rationale. Human follies have largely been covered through comedy of manners that is essentially reflective of upper-class contemporary people.

Course Objectives:
The objectives of this course are:

- To ensure an informed critical entry of the students into the historical, social, political, cultural and religious, and philosophical contexts of the literary pieces of 17th century
- To inform the learners about the style and genre of different literary pieces taught in the course
- To learn in what particular ways the authors have presented man in all his limitations and capabilities
- To appreciate the peculiar language, form and tone of the writings
- To think about how the author's position themselves in relation to the life and society they lived in examine if the texts present values relevant to all ages

Course Content:

- Francis Bacon: Selected Essays

Course Title: Romantic Poetry
Credit: 03

Rationale:

The course introduces a selection of poems by some of the most significant poets of the Romantic Period: Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley and Keats. Students need to locate and critique how diverse political, philosophical and social changes informed the writings of four luminaries of romantic period. Students are given the opportunity to develop their own poetic voices by reflecting on their own lives by writing about something they are familiar with and at the same time sharpen their writing skills. The speaking and performance portion of the unit gives them some experience with the criteria of an effective reading of a piece of poetry. Through reading of their representative poetry we will tackle some fundamental Romantic concepts such as poetic inspiration, memory of the past events, the sublime, deism and mysticism, the relationship between the poetic subject and nature as well as the role played by language. The poetic subject becomes the central topic of most Romantic poetry and it is actualized through a close relationship with nature that acts as either a consoling or a debilitating force. Priority will be given to the Romantic poets of the first generation. These poets often imagine themselves to be responding to the French Revolution. They rebel against social injustice, cherishing feelings for 'common' people. Their innovations at the level of subject matter and literary form were far-reaching to the point that we could speak about them as being the first 'modern' writers.

Course Objectives:

The objectives of this course are:

- To acquaint students with the socio-cultural currents in Britain during the period
- To train them in close literary-critical exegesis of the text

- To encourage them to apply the ideas derived from the text in understanding their surroundings and time
- To train them in analytical thinking and academic writing around the prescribed texts

Course Content:

William Wordsworth	Tintern Abbey
	Ode on Intimations of Immortality
Samuel Taylor Coleridge	The Rime of the Ancient Mariner
	Kubla Khan
Percy Bysshe Shelley	Ode to the West Wind
	To a Skylark

Rationale:

The Computer Fundamental course is designed to introduce the fundamental concepts and mechanisms of computer hardware and software. It helps to identify which hardware is used and which software is commonly used. This sessional course begins with practicing introductory concepts of computer and then covers other important topics such as Microsoft Word, Microsoft Excel, Microsoft PowerPoint, Paint, and Basic web technologies.

Course Objectives:

The objectives of this course are:

- To know basic ideas of computer hardware and software.
- To learn how to use software to complete any project.
- To develop problem-solving skills.

Course Contents:

- Introduction to Computer: Invention, Brief History, Evolution and Generations of Computers, Classification and Different Types of computers
- Number Systems: Radix or Base of Number System, Introductory concepts of Binary, Octal, Decimal and Hexadecimal number systems & their arithmetic operations, conversion of different number systems
- Codes: SBC, BCD, Gray, ASCII and EBCDIC codes, Data representation
- Computer Organization: Details of Basic Organization of computers, Computer Bus System

Course Title: 18th Century Literature (Prose, Poetry and Fiction)
Credit: 03

Rationale:

Students need to understand and critique the political, religious, aesthetic and philosophical ideas informed in the writings of the Restoration period. The English department currently has two upper-level undergraduate courses in Restoration and eighteenth-century British literature: "The Age of Dryden, Pope and Swift," which studies literature from 1660–1745, and "The Age of Johnson," which studies literature from 1745–1789. Most universities treat these periods in a single undergraduate course: Restoration and Eighteenth-Century British Literature. A single course would be consistent with our other upper-level offerings in pre-1800 British literature and would better suit the course rotation we have designed for these courses.

Course Objectives:

The objectives of this course are

- To study poems, essays, novels and speech in the Restoration and 18th century England and Ireland
- To give a broad introduction to the literature and culture of eighteenth-century Britain.

Course Content:

Addison and Steele : Coverley Papers (Selected)
Jonathan Swift : Gulliver’s Travels

Henry Fielding : Tom Jones (Book 1)
Jane Austen : Pride and Prejudice
Alexander Pope : The Rape of the Lock

Course Title: Literary Criticism
Credit: 03
Rationale:

This course includes texts of literary criticism written by notable literary critics beginning with Aristotle and ending with T.S. Eliot. The texts deal mainly with the nature and function of literature in general and of poetry in particular. In this course, students study and assimilate the rigorous analytical methods of such major critics as Aristotle, Johnson, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Arnold, and Eliot. In the texts the critics have expressed their opinions about and approach to poetry and through arguments they have justified their stand. The critics, philosophers, and poets we will be reading have debated many of the same kinds of questions we ask today: What is good literature? What is literature good for? We will be reading selections from classical, neoclassical, Romantic, Victorian, and Modernist writers. The selection of texts is based on two principles: first, many of the texts traditionally regarded as the high points in the historical dialogue and second, texts that continue to inform recent critical practices.

Course Objectives:

The objectives of this course are:

- To study methods and concepts of literary criticism.
- To identify and describe key theoretical/philosophical texts important to literary criticism.
- To focus on key theoretical/philosophical texts and combine those with recent works of literary criticism to interpret and critique literary works

Course Content:

Aristotle	: Poetics (Penguin Translation)
Samuel Johnson	: Preface to Shakespeare
William Wordsworth	: Preface to the Lyrical Ballads
S. T. Coleridge	: Biographia Literaria (Selections) as in Chikera
Matthew Arnold	: The Study of Poetry
T.S. Eliot	: Tradition and Individual Talent

Course Learning Outcomes: At the end of the Course, the student will be able to –

CLO1	Remember essential terms and elements of literary theories and criticisms
CLO2	Understand concepts of literary theories and criticisms
CLO3	Analyze concepts of literary theories and criticisms in the real life
CLO4	Evaluate literary theories in the perspective of contemporary society / world
CLO5	Create new ideas in literary theories and criticisms in the real life

Course Title: American Literature-II (Fiction and Drama)
Credit: 03
Rationale:

This course aims to introduce students to the major American writers from the eighteenth to the twentieth century. In this course students will learn the new and changing dramatic trends and interpret the modern and postmodern human condition. The course also gets the students acquainted with a wide range of stylistic, structural, and narrative trends of American literature. The primary aim of this course is to help students to develop ways to think about, study, research, discuss, and write about American writing and culture. You might also think of the twentieth Century American Literature and Culture as a course in how to read primary documents and how to use those documents to construct a literary and cultural history of the United States. Because the study of literature and culture is interdisciplinary, the range of issues we will explore is quite varied at times. Don't be scared or annoyed by this; be fearless and excited about it. Our primary purpose will always be to invent ways of analyzing, thinking about, talking about, and writing about the connection between literature and culture in the period

Course Objectives:

The objectives of this course are:

- To appreciate the 'modernity' of twentieth century American drama;
- To evaluate the changing historical, cultural and social contexts in which particular texts are written and received;
- To learn form, structure and style that influence both meaning and context;
- To enable students to come to an understanding of the culture, the literature, and the history of the American settlers.

- To help students attain a command of the American style of prose writing.
- To provide a general historical framework for the periods as it introduces students to the culture of Americans.
- To stimulate classroom discussion about various forms of prose writing and train them in creative and analytical thinking
- To understand the Theatre of the Absurd and relate to our own contemporary issues.

Course Content:

Fiction:

Nathaniel Howthorne: The Scarlet Letter
Ernest Hemingway : The Sun Also Rises
Toni Morrison : Beloved

Drama:

Arthur Miller : Death of a Salesman
Edward Albee : The Zoo Story

Course Learning Outcomes: At the end of the course, the students will be able to –

CLO1	Demonstrate an ability to understand the problems of modern life
CLO2	Exhibit their knowledge and appreciation of Twentieth Century drama and fiction
CLO3	Demonstrate sufficient knowledge on the nature of prose as a genre
CLO4	Be acquainted with the major phases of the evolution of American literature

a) The Letter Grade

The total performance of a student in a given course is based on a scheme of continuous assessment. For theory courses this continuous assessment is made through a set of quizzes, class evaluation, class participation, homework, assignment and a term final examination. The assessment in laboratory courses is made by evaluating performance of the student at work during the class, viva-voce during laboratory hours and quizzes. Each course has a certain number of credits, which describes its corresponding weight ages. A letter grade with a specified number of grade points is awarded in each course for which a student is registered. A student's performance is measured by the number of credits completed satisfactorily and by the weighted average of the grade points earned. A minimum grade point average (GPA) is essential for satisfactory progress. 60/36/48 credits have to be acquired in order to qualify for the degree. Letter grades and corresponding grade points will be awarded in accordance with the provisions shown below:

Numerical Markings	Grade	Grade Points
80% and above	A+	4.00
75% to below 80%	A	3.75
70% to below 75%	A-	3.50
65% to below 70%	B+	3.25
60% to below 65%	B	3.00
55% to below 60%	B-	2.75
50% to below 55%	C+	2.50
45% to below 50%	C	2.25
40%to below 45%	D	2.00
below 40%	F*	0.00
Incomplete	I	-
Withdrawal	W	-

* Subject in which the student gets 'F' grades will not be counted towards credits requirements and for the calculation of Grade Point Average (GPA)

b) Distribution of Marks:

Thirty percent (30%) of marks of a theoretical course shall be allotted for continuous assessment, i.e. quizzes/ class tests, class evaluation and class participation. The rest of the marks will be allotted to the term final. Distribution of marks for a given course is as follows:

Assessment Method	(100%)
Class Assessment
Class Performance	05
Class Tests/Assignments	20
Mid-Term Assessment (Exam/Project)	15
Exam
Final exam	60

The number of quizzes of a course shall be n+1, where n is the number of credits of the course. Evaluation of performance in quizzes will be on the basis of the best n quizzes. The scheme of continuous assessment that a particular teacher wishes to follow for a course will be announced on the first day of classes.

c) Eligibility to Appear at the Final Examinations:

i. In order to be eligible for appearing the Final examination, a candidate shall be required to attend on an average not less than 60% of the total lectures.
ii. The Controller of the Examinations shall issue admit card only to the eligible candidates as per rules and send these to the concerned Department/Faculty and the Head shall distribute to the candidates.

d) Duration of Examination:

Examination will be held on term basis. Time allotted for the Final Examination will be as follows:

3.0 Hours for 60 Marks

e) Attendance:

All students are expected to attend classes regularly. The university believes that attendance is necessary for effective learning. The first responsibility of a student is to attend classes regularly, and one is required to attend at least 60% of all classes held in any course, otherwise he/she shall not be allowed to sit for the final examination.

11.	Rationale of the Course	:	This course introduces students with some of the major writings including essays, pamphlets, epics, and 'metaphysical poetry' in English produced in the 17th century England. The course will offer students an understanding of renaissance and how it influenced the philosophy of the seventeenth century. Students will be given an insight into the politics and practice of 17th century through different genres- epic, essay, drama, pamphlet, and allegory. They will not only read and interpret these literary masterpieces, but also familiarize themselves with historical, social, political, cultural and religious, and philosophical contexts. In the selection of subject matters, it was often serious about human flaws and therefore advocated an acutely felt need of controlling them with orders- social, religious, and rationale. Human follies have largely been covered through comedy of manners that is essentially reflective of upper-class contemporary people.
12.	Course Objectives	:

Course Outline

Part A

1.	Course Code	:	ENG 2103
2.	Course Title	:	Romantic Poetry
3.	Course Type	:	Core Course
4.	Level/Term	:	2-I
5.	Academic Session	:	Winter 2023
6.	Course Teacher(s)	:	Md.Nahid Hasan
7.	Pre-requisite	:	N/A
8.	Credit Value	:	3.00
9.	Contact Hours	:	42
10.	Total Marks	:	300
11.	Rationale of the Course	:	The course introduces a selection of poems by some of the most significant poets of the Romantic Period: Wordsworth, Coleridge, Shelley and Keats. Students need to locate and critique how diverse political, philosophical and social changes informed the writings of six luminaries of romantic period. Students are given the opportunity to develop their own poetic voices by reflecting on their own lives by writing about something they are familiar with and at the same time sharpen their writing skills. The poetry speaking and performance portion of the unit gives them some experience with the criteria of an effective reading of a piece of poetry. Through reading of their representative poetry we will tackle some fundamental Romantic concepts such as poetic inspiration, memory of the past events, the sublime, deism and mysticism, the relationship between the poetic subject and nature as well as the role played by language. The poetic subject becomes the central topic of most Romantic poetry and it is actualized through a close relationship with nature that acts as either a consoling or a debilitating force. Priority will be given to the Romantic poets of the first generation. These poets often imagine themselves to be responding to the French Revolution. They rebel against social injustice, cherishing feelings for 'common' people. Their innovations at the level of subject matter but also of literary form were far-reaching to the point that we could speak about them as being the first 'modern' writers.
12.	Course Objectives	:

i. To acquaint students with the socio-cultural currents in Britain during the period
ii. To train them in close literary-critical exegesis of the text
iii. To encourage them to apply the ideas derived from the text in understanding their surroundings and time
iv. To train them in analytical thinking and academic writing around the prescribed texts

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Remember major writers and writings of Romantic poetry
CLO2	Understand the distinctive themes of Romantic poetry
CLO3	Analyze critical explanation, appreciation and criticism to Romantic poetry

Course Outline

Part A

1. Course Code : ENG 2201
2. Course Title : 18th Century Literature (Prose, Poetry and Fiction)
3. Course Type : Core Course
4. Level/Term : 2-II
5. Academic Session : Winter 2023
6. Course Teacher(s) : MD. Nahid Hasan
7. Pre-requisite : N/A
8. Credit Value : 3.00
9. Contact Hours : 42
10. Total Marks : 300
11. Rationale of the Course : Students need to understand and critique the political, religious, aesthetic and philosophical ideas informed in the writings of the Restoration period. The English department currently has two upper-level undergraduate courses in Restoration and eighteenth-century British literature: "The Age of Dryden, Pope and Swift," which studies literature from 1660–1745, and "The Age of Johnson," which studies literature from 1745–1789. Most universities treat these periods in a single undergraduate course: Restoration and Eighteenth-Century British Literature. A single course would be consistent with our other upper-level offerings in pre-1800 British literature and would better suit the course rotation we have designed for these courses.
12. Course Objectives :
    xiii. To learn poems, plays, essays, novel and speech in the Restoration and 18th century England and Ireland
    xiv. To give a broad introduction to the literature and culture of eighteenth-century Britain

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Remember the characteristics of 18th century literature and the writings of different writers and poets.
CLO2	Understand the political, religious, aesthetic and philosophical ideas in the writings of 18th century
CLO3	Evaluate the major writers and literary works of the period and its philosophical basis and claim expertise on at least one aspect of the period's culture and its relationship to the literature
CLO4	Apply the critical tools of the discipline of literary studies in analysis of texts.
CLO5	Create any criticism on the aspects of 18th century literature

11. Rationale of the Course : This course offers some of the great dramatic works of two of the most prolific literary ages in the history of English literature. Deeply infused with the spirit of the Renaissance, the plays cover diverse dramatic genres – tragedy, comedy, romance, and history plays – as well as incorporate values and spirit that have long shaped the development of English literature. In reading these seminal texts, both knowledge of the socio-political background of the relevant ages and politically informed critical reading (for example, issues of race and gender) are required.
12. Course Objectives :
    i. To orient students with English plays at a deeper level.
    ii. To help them learn how to read plays as academic work
    iii. To help them grow consciousness about society and culture through reading plays along with getting pleasure

11.	Rationale of the Course	:	This course aims to introduce students to the distinctive achievements of the major English poets of the twentieth century. In this course, students will examine how some of the most original poets of the last century diagnose the modern human condition. Students are also encouraged to appreciate the implications of the coexistence of simplicity and obscurity in the language of modern poetry. These experimental 20th century poetries offer an emphasis on impressionism and subjectivity (on how we experience rather than what we experience); they examine the ambiguity of experience rather than fixed narrative points of view, stable characterization, and clear-cut morality.
12.	Course Objectives	:

i. To achieve an understand of Modernism and the 20th century modernist poetry
ii. To achieve a sense of the historical significance of the 20th century poetry
iii. To develop skills for effective critical analysis, close reading, and textual interpretation

7. Pre-requisite : N/A
8. Credit Value : 3.00
9. Contact Hours : 42
10. Total Marks : 300
11. Rationale of the Course : This course includes texts of literary criticism written by notable literary critics beginning with Aristotle and ending with T.S. Eliot. The texts deal mainly with the nature and function of literature in general and of poetry in particular. In this course, Students study and assimilate the rigorous analytical methods of such major critics as Aristotle, Johnson, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Arnold, and Eliot. In the texts the critics have expressed their opinions about and approach to poetry and through arguments they have justified their stand. The critics, philosophers, and poets we will be reading have debated many of the same kinds of questions we ask today: What is good literature? What is literature good for? We will be reading selections from classical, neoclassical, Romantic, Victorian, and Modernist writers. The selection of texts is based on two principles: first, many of the texts traditionally regarded as the high points in the historical dialogue and second, texts that continue to inform recent critical practices.

12. Course Objectives :
    i. To study methods and concepts of literary criticism.
    ii. Identify and describe key theoretical/philosophical texts important to literary criticism.
    iii. Focus on key theoretical/philosophical texts and combine those with recent works of literary criticism to interpret and critique literary works

8.	Credit Value	:	3.00
9.	Contact Hours	:	42
10.	Total Marks	:	300
11.	Rationale of the Course	:	The rationale of studying the course "Introduction to Phonetics & Phonology" is to involve learners in the primary exploration of Phonetics as the science to consider and investigate speech production through speech organs, properties of speech sounds and recognition of speech structures. Through the course, learners also explore Phonology for the study of speech sounds of a language or languages and the laws governing them, particularly the laws governing the composition and combination of speech sounds in language.
12.	Course Objectives	:	The objectives of this course are-

i. To develop students' understanding of the structure and the articulation of speech sounds regarding phonological theories.
ii. To emphasize how the speech sounds work in both native and non-native speech in formal and informal contexts.
iii. To develop students' ability to transcribe speech using the IPA.
iv. To make learners aware of teaching pronunciation to EFL/ESL students, focusing on the Bangla Speaking EFL learners.

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Remember the basic concept of English vowels, consonants, groups of sound etc.
CLO2	Understand thoughts of places and Manners of Articulation, differences between Phonetics and Phonology
CLO3	Analyze the rules of complementary distribution, syllable, phone, and allophone to use words inversely in practice.

Course Outline

Part A

1. Course Code : ENG 3205

2. Course Title : American Literature-II (Fiction and Drama)
3. Course Type : Core Course
4. Level/Term : 3-II
5. Academic Session : Winter 2023
6. Course Teacher(s) : Md. Golam Shahariar
7. Pre-requisite : N/A
8. Credit Value : 3.00
9. Contact Hours : 42
10. Total Marks : 300
11. Rationale of the Course : This course aims to introduce students to the major American writers from the eighteenth to the twentieth century. In this course students will learn the new and changing dramatic trends and interpret the modern and postmodern human condition. The course also gets the students acquainted with a wide range of stylistic, structural, and narrative trends of American literature. The primary aim of this course is to help students to develop ways to think about, study, research, discuss, and write about American writing and culture. You might also think of the twentieth Century American Literature and Culture as a course in how to read primary documents and how to use those documents to construct a literary and cultural history of the United States. Because the study of literature and culture is interdisciplinary, the range of issues we will explore is quite varied at times. Don't be scared or annoyed by this; be fearless and excited about it. Our primary purpose will always be to invent ways of analyzing, thinking about, talking about, and writing about the connection between literature and culture in the period

12. Course Objectives : The objectives of this course are-
    i. Appreciate the 'modernity' of twentieth century American drama;
    ii. Evaluate the changing historical, cultural and social contexts in which particular texts are written and received;
    iii. Learn form, structure and style that influence both meaning and context;
    iv. Enable students to come to an understanding of the culture, the literature, and the history of the American settlers.
    v. To help students attain a command of the American style of prose writing.
    vi. To provide a general historical framework for the periods as it introduces students to the culture of Americans vii. To stimulate classroom discussion about various forms of prose writing and train them in creative and analytical thinking viii. Understand the Theatre of the Absurd and relate to our own contemporary issues
13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Demonstrate an ability to understand the problems of modern life
CLO2	Exhibit their knowledge and appreciation of Twentieth Century drama and fiction
CLO3	Demonstrate sufficient knowledge on the nature of prose as a genre
CLO4	Be acquainted with the major phases of the evolution of American literature
CLO5	Analyze and interpret the issues of Puritan society, loss of spirituality, loneliness and absurdity

Course Outline

Part A

1.	Course Code	:	ENG 4101
2.	Course Title	:	Sociolinguistics and Psycholinguistics
3.	Course Type	:	Core Course
4.	Level/Term	:	4-I
5.	Academic Session	:	Winter 2023
6.	Course Teacher(s)	:	MD. Nahid Hasan
7.	Pre-requisite	:	N/A
8.	Credit Value	:	3.00
9.	Contact Hours	:	42
10.	Total Marks	:	300
11.	Rationale of the Course	:	Psycho-sociolinguistics represents a two-part course, which is concerned with psychological and social aspects of language. Psycholinguistics (the first part) is the use of language as a window to the nature and structure of the human mind. It includes topics such as speech production and comprehension, language acquisition, and language and the brain. Sociolinguistics (the second part) is the study of ways in which groups of people use language. It covers topics like language variation, language and gender, and language and culture.

12. Course Objectives :

i. To provide students with a sound understanding of languages in relation to society. It introduces students to Sociolinguistics, a field of study which ties language and communication to the context in which the language is being used.

ii. To focus on an investigation of how language varies according to context. The course will include Language and the Ethnography of Communication.

iii. To understand the relationship between context and language and proposes language variation as linked either to the users of language or to the use of language.

iv. To aim at gaining an understanding of how language is acquired and processed, what language disorders may take place, why people choose to speak the way they do, and how people contextualize their choices (e.g. of utterances, varieties, languages) in order to communicate.

v. To awaken the students' awareness of language as a dynamic communication system and provides them with insights to be effective language learners and would-be language teachers. This includes varied aspects of child language acquisition as well as second/foreign language learning and acquisition.

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Remember the basics of sociolinguistics and psycholinguistics
CLO2	Understand how language and social factors are inter-related

11.	Rationale of the Course	:	The course introduces participants to some of the major trends in methods, approaches, assumptions, and issues on the nature of language and how languages can be acquired and taught. The discussion is focused on the development of English Language Teaching (ELT) methodology, of which participants are exposed to the development from traditional methods to the current ELT methodology. It also includes syllabus design, materials design, and testing. Participants are also given hands-on experience in teaching the four language skills: reading, writing, listening, and speaking. The broad aim of this course is to produce good English Language teachers.

12. Course Objectives :

i. To understand fundamental principles of language teaching methodology
ii. To be able to learn approaches to language teaching and learning designed to assist language development across the four skills of listening, speaking, reading, and writing
iii. To learn examples of the ways that language teaching is carried out in various contexts
iv. To design syllabus and materials write good tests

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Remember the history of evolving English Language Teaching methods
CLO2	Understand the significant methods of ELT with theoretical concepts, principles, strengths, limitations, etc.
CLO3	Analyze the methods and the approaches of ELT for spreading better knowledge among the learners

11.	Rationale of the Course	:	This course introduces students to the rich variety of the African and Caribbean literature in English in the 20th Century, often dubbed 'postcolonial' writings. In this course, students will study the ways in which modern African and Caribbean authors writes back to (revise and re-vision) several colonial-imperialist texts which have subordinated, marginalizes or rendered invisible African and Caribbean histories, culture and identities. Some attention will be paid to but the emphasis will be the analysis of literary texts by Afro-Caribbean writers in several different genres.
12.	Course Objectives	:

i. To address a range of issues connected to these variously hybrid cultures – slavery, black identity and sexuality, nation/narration, home and location/dislocation

ii. To take account of myth and history, politics and language, in relation to the connected worlds of Africa and the Caribbean

iii. To investigate literary texts written in these circumstances Both Africa and the Caribbean have occupied the place of fantasy for European and American audiences.

iv. To look more closely at literatures that take the measure of this fantasy, perforce, but also achieve what we might call a mixed singularity

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

11.	Rationale of the Course	:	Research Methodology is a hands-on course designed to impart education in the foundational methods and techniques of academic research in social sciences and business management context. Research scholars would examine and be practically exposed to the main components of a research framework i.e., problem definition, research design, data collection, ethical issues in research, report writing, and presentation. Once equipped with this knowledge, participants would be well-placed to conduct disciplined research under supervision in an area of their choosing. In addition to their application in an academic setting, many of the methodologies discussed in this course would be similar to those deployed in professional research environments.
12.	Course Objectives	:

i. To develop understanding of the basic framework of research process.
ii. To develop an understanding of various research designs and techniques.
iii. To identify various sources of information for literature review and data collection.
iv. To develop an understanding of the ethical dimensions of conducting applied research.

v. To appreciate the components of scholarly writing and evaluate its quality.

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Attend to the politics of what to do and not to do as researchers
CLO2	Increase critical thinking skills on various types of research and demonstrate this by seriously considering multiple viewpoints and perspectives
CLO3	Submit a research proposal and deliver an oral presentation
CLO4	Have ethical awareness of plagiarism and other illegal practices in research

8.	Credit Value	:	3.00
9.	Contact Hours	:	42
10.	Total Marks	:	300
11.	Rationale of the Course	:	This course will look closely at five Shakespeare plays, one each from the major genres of tragedy, comedy, history, and romance. The plays to be studied will vary from year to year depending on participating staff members. Topics covered will include character, form, spectacle, theme, sources, the original conditions of production, and the reproduction of Shakespeare's plays in a contemporary context. Students will be introduced to a range of critical approaches to Shakespeare's plays, and be encouraged to reflect on questions of canonicity, cultural value and authority, and the politics of production and reproduction. Film and TV adaptations of the plays may be used to enhance discussion and reflection. The course is suitable for students with little or no prior knowledge of Shakespeare and also for those wishing to become more familiar with the playwright's work. It may be studied as a 'one off' course or for the sound basis it will provide for studying some of the advanced courses offered by the Discipline of English, such as Old Texts Made New: Literary Imitation and Allusion, Tragedy, Renaissance Writing and Adaptation.
12.	Course Objectives	:

i. To enable students to come to an understanding of the Shakespearean genre.
ii. To help students attain a command over the special Shakespearean use of language.
iii. To stimulate classroom discussion about various forms of drama and train them in creative and analytical thinking.

13. Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs) and Mapping of CLOs with Program Learning

Outcomes (PLOs):

CLO1	Identify the basic characteristics of Shakespearean Tragedy, Comedy and Romance
CLO2	Identify and analyze characters, themes, symbols, motifs and setting in drama
CLO3	Interpret the issues regarding the historical background of these dramas
CLO4	Evaluate Shakespeare's contribution to the English language, and to the development of modern thought

	Assignment/Homework	05%
	Class Performance	05%
	Mid Term	15%
b) Final Examination		60%
Total Marks		100%

iii. Make-up Procedures

- Missed Class Tests, Assignment, Class performance and Midterm: There will be no make-up exam if anyone intentionally misses class test or midterm exam without any valid and legitimate reason. Absence in the exams will be regarded as absent and Zero (0) marks will be applied. Notifying the instructor before the exam is a must if a student misses any exam for reasons beyond his/her control. In extreme circumstances, if the student cannot inform earlier, he/she must inform the instructor within three (3) days of the exam.
- RIB (Referred, Improvement and Backlog) exams will be conducted according to the Examination Policy for Undergraduate Programs of BAUST.
